OUR AGENT AT CUMBERLAND GAP.

Lieutenant A. J. Harrington, Company A, Twenty-second Kentucky Volunteers, is agent for the Louisville Democrat.

A VIGOROUS PROSECUTION OF THE WAR.

We have at last learned the magnitude of the work we have to perform in putting down this rebellion. The conspirators showed great skill in precipitating the revolution, and they have so far consolidated their power as to command nearly the whole physical power of their section. Step by step they have got committed to their despicable cause, one after another in the South, until, wherever their power is, patriotism is awed into silence. They first seduced into their arms all that would volunteer, and have since levied almost in mass. Although not more than one third or fourth of the people of the Union, they have a force equal, if not superior, to ours. Great as were our preparations to put down the rebellion, they were inadequate.

We are not at war with a foreign nation where equal forces, or nearly equal ones, may be expected to settle the controversy. Our object is to enforce the laws upon every inch of American soil. It is not a trial of arms in which we are to test the courage of parties. Our plain, obvious duty is to enlist all the power of the Government at once, and put an end to the contest. If we had to-day a million soldiers, instead of three or four hundred thousand, we might have half a million of soldiers in Virginia, and the Confederate army would be captured with little effusion of blood. It is quite competent for the loyal people of this Government to overwhelm the Confederate forces and capture and disperse them without these bloody contests which result from equal forces and equal chances of victory. Half a million can't enforce the execution of the laws against the resistance of the same number. The employment of no more only provokes and prolongs the contest. It is the duty of the Government to send into the field overwhelming numbers; step enlisting no more till the Confederate States are cowed with armies, and resistance is swept away. Humanity requires this course. The whole power of the country, nothing less. It is the apprehension that this contest will degenerate into one of savage cruelty. The way to prevent it is to end the contest by overwhelming power. There will be no temptation to exasperate an overwhelming, irresistible power, and provoke acts of cruelty.

The late disgusting acts of Congress, proposing confiscation, emancipation, and the employment of negroes, all resulted from conscious weakness. They were desperate expedients to supply the lack of power. If they had called for the whole power of the country the rebellion would have fallen without any of these desperate expedients, and it will never be put down by them. We want no new laws with hard penalties leading to barbarous results. We want soldiers, soldiers, soldiers in countless multitudes—legions, that there is no power in this conspiracy to resist.

If we had had at Bull Run half a million, instead of seventy-five thousand, the rebellion would have been crushed out, and thousands of lives would have been saved, and hundreds of millions of dollars would have been saved.

At Richmond, McClellan wanted regiments, brigades, divisions of soldiers. For want of them thousands of men were slaughtered.

The past can't be recalled; nor can we condemn those in authority that they did not foresee what would be necessary; but there can be hereafter no excuse for mistakes on the great point of an ample supply of force.

We are constantly annoyed and mortified to read that here and there our inferior forces have been overwhelmed by the enemy. There should be no excuse for this. The enemy should everywhere be outwitted and overwhelmed. The loyal States have men, enough and resources enough to do it, and it should be done. The Government sees that no draft can be made on the patriotism of the country that will not be appreciated.

This will be a vigorous and energetic prosecution of the war. The parade of laws on the statute-book and bulky proclamations are all idle. With such force no more laws are needed, no unconstitutional enactments or unconstitutional practices are wanted. Such power can afford to be generous as well as just. It will accomplish the end without a trespass on private rights or personal liberty. In its presence we can afford to support the dominion of law and order, and dispense with suspicions and watchfulness, which comparative weakness is compelled to resort to. Let us have this sort of vigor.

General Phelps won't consent to allow the negro to work on trenches, and consequently, resigns. If we could feel sure that his resignation was accepted, as it ought to be, we would forgive him for all the fuss he has tried to kick up, about the negro.

Wendell Phillips said he had been nineteen years trying to take nineteen States out of the Union. The futility of his efforts is shown in the fact that in the last nineteen years, or fifteen States have come into the Union.

We don't believe Breckinridge was so dirty that the waters of the Mississippi would clean him. On the contrary, we believe he was most officially cleaned out at Baton Rouge, and didn't need any more water.

Must be Dey or Dey. John C. Breckinridge moved his forces back from the Mississippi, at Baton Rouge, "on account of the scarcity of water." The Pacific ocean would about suit his case.

STAMPEDE—Last night, after the horses for Col. Jacobs' cavalry had arrived at their camp, near Eminence, a general stampede took place among them, tearing down fences, running through fields, and in the woods. A larger portion of them were captured, but not all. Two men were hurt in trying to get out of the way. It is a wonder that more were not hurt, as they were lying in the amphitheater, through which most of the horses ran.

AN IRISH WOMAN, of unusual size, made her appearance, last evening, in front of Hospital No. 6. She immediately began an attack upon the guards who were on duty, when she was repulsed. She rallied, surrounded by a thousand urchins (more or less), when officer Henry Greene, with reinforcements, surrounded her and took her prisoner.

The finest and best horses of the country will be furnished, and the men will be well provided for. The campaign will be made in our good Commonwealth, and will not be stretched to any large division of the country. The men will be quartered in a Southern state, nor will men be subjected to many of the devastating diseases incident to camp.

Kentuckians—brave and chivalric men, who know not how to yield when urged, other nobler men, in this hour of peril. The State of all reptile hosts, next to our Motherland, is in the hands of the Devil. We have a right to defend Kentucky's honor.
